Cotehele Water Mill

St Dominick, near Saltash, Cornwall PL12 6TA
+44 (0) 1579 350606

Cotehele Mill was reconditioned in 2002. It is owned by the National Trust and operates currently one day a week to demonstrate the workings of a Water Mill. The miller and volunteers demonstrate all aspects of milling and bread baking on the working day. Check before visiting. The flour milled is sold at the shop.

The present mill was built on the site of a medieval water mill near the Morden Stream. The wheel is free turning for visitors to see, the power for the mill comes from a single micro-hydro turbine and powerhouse located upstream of the mill. This powers one of the three original stones.

Wholemeal flour is the sole commercial product at present though other flours can be milled to enhance the demonstrations as required. The flour quality is excellent, though it can only be obtained at the mill and site shop. (2011)
