Ganol Watermill is situated on the River Wye. The current mill dates from about 1841 and it was restored in 2009 to enable it to produce flour for local use. The mill can be found off the A487 going south from Aberystwyth and it is located behind the village school.

The mill uses a French Burrstone to produce a variety of flour which includes specialist locally grown wheat of single varieties. In 2013 this also included Triticale flour, which is a 100 year old hybrid grain variety blending the characters of wheat and rye. It is best to check the website to see what varieties of flour are available and to check the local stockists.
